 McGans Coty School of Architecture- I came to know about this school of Architecture through Mr. Solomon D. Vedamuthu, a renowned Architect, Educationist and trainer par excellence, in Chennai. Later, I get to know about the Angalamman Trust chaired by Mr. Murali Kumaran, who took so much interest in education in Architecture, for which he would have taken pains in his strides to attain this stage of accolades. . In a day where Education becomes commercial it is very astonishing that the trust is not collecting any capitation fee and trying to provide all the amenities which are essential to the school of architecture. The few year of existence made them to build a new campus in Perar , a ten Km away from hustle and bustle of Coty Town, as earlier batches were staying in Coty itself. This year all the students have been accommodated in the newly built Hostel in a scenic valley. The spurt of demand and good number of admissions is a good augury for future; nevertheless, it brought pressure on available assets. As years go by I hope that the amenities would be put in place and going to become one of the sought after Residential Institution in Tamilnadu.

What is a striking feature is the dedication of Trust members, directors and faculties. Angalamman Educational Trust with Mr. Murali Kumaran as its Chairman visualised and gave shape to such a magnificent Service. The vision and aim of the Trust can be achieved only by the involvement and selfless participation of the stakeholders. The involvement of Director, Principal, HOD and others assures the same. The Institution created exclusively for Architecture likely to grow as a Gurukulam with free flow of ideas, creativity and utmost understanding among experienced Professors, teachers, senior students and the fresher's. The parents are willing to be part of the evolution the Administration is aimed at to bring in excellence in architectural academics. I as one among the parents of the benefactors wish McGans to grow like a wisdom tree.
